This collection of diagrams is an ongoing catalog of all of the food in my kitchen: the fruit basket on the counter, the pantry cupboards, the refrigerator and freezer, and the liquor cart. In the following pages, the food is sorted according to type, where it was purchased, whether it is organic or not, who consumes it, where it's from, and how far it travelled to reach my kitchen in Golden, CO, USA.

What began as a simple cataloging exercise quickly evolved into a surprising puzzle of trying to figure out where things are from, what they're made of, or what they even are. I plan to diagram the food contents of my kitchen again at the end of the semester to see how researching for Flocktown Farms has impacted my personal food choices.
