

Food Transportation

This is a look as to my perception of how crops get from the producer to my personal home. As shown in the diagram most of the objects that are bought at a supermarket are brought in by truck and are then bought and brought home by a person vehicle. This opens ideas of a local farm being able to supply the consumer with fresh produce straight from the farm to the consumer. Potentially this could lower the price of the consumer's goods while increasing the quality.
